

BBC Music Magazine

REVIEW

HEADPHONES

Jamo wEAR In40i £90

Danish loudspeaker company Jamo may be owned by Klipsch, but its first foray into the in-ear headphone market is truly a solo effort. It's obvious from the start that Jamo has filtered its trademark loudspeaker 'Danish Sound Design' into its three-strong range of earphones, especially in the In40i top-end model.

I haven't heard earphones so open and airy in a long time. Music is given space to breath, revealing a remarkable depth of field and clarity without being over clinical and un-involving. The oval buds nestle gently but tightly inside the ears and I found that ear fatigue wasn't a problem during a prolonged listening session.

bbg.eu.com

